FDP Overview

.The Faculty Development Programme (FDP) is organized into several modules, carefully distributed over a week-long duration. These modules encompass a variety of lessons, presenting instructional content, resources, interactive hands-on sessions, demonstrations, and valuable insights from guest subject matter experts. To assess understanding, participants will conclude each module with a multiple-choice quiz, featuring at least one graded question.

Objectives of FDP

The FDP is a comprehensive course designed to equip participants with the necessary skills and knowledge to excel in academic research. In an era of rapid information expansion and technological advancements, this course focuses on leveraging cutting-edge tools and techniques to enhance the research process, from initial discovery to the final dissemination of findings.

Objectives

To identify the most relevant academic research papers.

To successfully use research support tools to enhance the effectiveness and productivity of research.

To evaluate and select resources and cater to various learning abilities.

To enhance search skills from traditional to advanced methods for expediting literature reviews.

To summarize academic research articles and save valuable time.

To promote academic integrity and research ethics.

To identify predatory, fake, and cloned journals.

To smoothly collect, organize, and categorize academic articles using state-of-the-art tools.
